Overview

Jason focuses his practice on resolving construction disputes and assisting clients in all phases of construction projects. He represents public and private owners, contractors, architects, and engineers in construction-related matters. Jason also assists with catastrophic loss cases and has experience representing plaintiffs and defending companies in personal injury and wrongful death tort litigation.

Experience

- Represented a general contractor of a mixed use construction project in a personal injury case caused by alleged construction defect.
- Represented a roofing company in a four-school, multimillion-dollar construction project with alleged major defects that caused water intrusion.
- Represented a Mason against allegations of improperly installed flashing that allegedly caused water intrusion and mold growth at a school.
- Experience conducting legal research including analyzing construction documents, obtaining fact and expert depositions, and participating in settlement negotiations.
- Experience handling complex civil defense from wrongful death cases.
- Worked during law school as a law clerk for the Cincinnati Solicitor's Office performing legal research and writing for use in City litigation.
